

Biographical information:

Leanne Bowler is an Assistant Professor at the University of Pittsburgh, where she is responsible for the specialization in children's and youth librarianship. She teaches courses about technology for young people, children's literature, and services for early childhood. Her research interests are in the area of children's and young adult information behavior. She has a PhD and two Master degrees in Library Science and Education.